

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

Why is it that our government always turns to the average-joe citizen to produce monies? We make an average of 15 long-distance calls A YEAR on our home phone and NONE on our cell phone. Why should we pay the same rate for long-distance that businesses pay? We don't want to pay more for telephone service. We are already paying too much, including fees for services we will never use. We urge you to seriously consider the burden that this proposed "flat fee" would place on the average long-distance caller like us. Reject the flat fee proposal and come up with a fairer way to change how contributions are made to the Universal Service Fund.

I use my wireless phone for safety, security and convenience.

Keep the Universal Service Fee fair!

Sincerely,

Jack and JoAnn Macklin
